FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 MAR 2026

The escalation of the conflict in the Middle East has been the defining recent development, triggering heightened volatility and broad-based losses across global bond and currency markets. As the shock is still unfolding, uncertainty remains high. In the near term, the balance of risks points to higher inflation and weaker growth. Importantly, the global economy is structurally less sensitive to oil shocks than in previous decades, as oil intensity has declined. Historical experience suggests that oil prices typically need to more than double on a YoY basis to materially disrupt US growth and equity markets. While this remains a risk, policy actions from US President Donald Trump's administration aimed at stabilising energy markets may help contain the fallout. Two key considerations stand out. First, the asymmetrical nature of the conflict increases the likelihood of sustained disruptions to global oil supply, as Iran-aligned forces seek to keep prices elevated using unconventional tools. Second, Trump's tolerance for sustained high oil prices appears limited. Recent actions - including proposals for naval escorts, a softer stance on Russian oil sanctions, and diplomatic signalling - indicate a clear preference for moderating energy prices, particularly amid domestic political pressure linked to cost-of-living concerns ahead of the US midterm elections. In South Africa (SA), the impact has been reflected in a broad rise in risk premia across the bond curve. Market expectations have shifted away from rate cuts, with an increased probability now assigned to potential rate hikes. Despite this, we believe the conflict has disrupted - but not derailed - the country's improving macroeconomic trajectory. The portfolio remains conservatively positioned to navigate this environment. Over 90% of assets are allocated to floating-rate notes, allowing the Fund to benefit from elevated policy rates. The Fund's average life is 3.29 years, with a weighted average credit spread of 1.55%. Our focus remains on preserving capital while delivering stable income returns above traditional money market alternatives.

A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER cannot be regarded as an indication of future TERs. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the Fund and impacts Fund returns. The TIC should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors including market returns, the type of Fund, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.
