FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 AUG 2020

While the JSE surged higher during the early parts of August, much of this investor optimism waned towards the month-end. A volatile local currency, as well as domestic political risk, eroded gains from earlier in the month. As an example, the rand witnessed its strongest day in almost 3 years on the penultimate trading day of August only to give up all these gains during the final trading session. The FTSE JSE All Share Index ended the month in the red (down 0.3%), a disappointing result since the index was up by more than 6% at one point in the month. Domestic bonds returned 0.9% for the month, outperforming cash but underperforming inflation-linked bonds as real yields compressed sharply. The government yield curve remains exceptionally steep, pricing in significant fiscal risk. Expectations of improving economic conditions across the globe sustained investors' appetite for risky assets. This propelled stock markets, particularly US markets, higher over the course of the month. Global indices ended 6.2% higher and US equity markets advanced an impressive 7.5% in dollar terms. The tepid rand strength of around 0.5% had a limited impact on the gains once converted to local currency returns. The portfolio maintains maximum offshore exposure, to diversify risk and to access the growth opportunities offered globally. This continued to prove a sound strategy as global equity markets outperformed domestic markets by a considerable margin even after accounting for the slightly stronger rand. In the domestic space, higher-quality companies continued to show their earnings resilience in a challenging environment.
