FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 AUG 2020

While the JSE surged higher during the early parts of August, much of this investor optimism waned towards month-end and the FTSE JSE All Share Index ended the month in the red (down 0.3%). Domestic bonds returned 0.9% for the month, outperforming cash but underperforming inflation-linked bonds as real yields compressed sharply. As an example, real yields on the short end of the curve fell from just under 4% to below 3% by month-end, driving total return differences between inflation-linked bonds and their nominal counterparts. With South Africa's (SA's) inflation print picking up modestly to 3.2%, it appears that the market has begun pricing in a more realistic assessment of inflation, thereby unlocking some of the value in short-dated, inflation-linked bonds. The government yield curve remains exceptionally steep with material yield pickup on offer for those investors willing to take some term risk. There remains a question mark over SA's fiscal position which explains the stubbornly steep yield curve.

Expectations of improving economic conditions across the globe sustained investors' appetite for risky assets. This propelled stock markets, particularly US markets, higher over the course of the month. Global indices ended 6.2% higher and US equity markets advanced by an impressive 7.5% in dollar terms. Sound returns from the domestic bond market continued to provide a solid base for the Stable Fund to generate a respectable performance when combined with the strong showing from global equities. A material position in domestic fixed income as well as offshore asset classes also provided a hedge against a volatile domestic equity market.
