FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 MAR 2024

Since the launch of Chat GPT in November 2022 and the subsequent bull market in AI-related stocks, Google's public efforts in the space have been underwhelming. While Microsoft has taken an aggressive approach towards launching and marketing AI-infused products (as well as making AI acquisitions, with Open AI being the most noteworthy), Google's response has been lacklustre and reactive. This is surprising, given Google's mission to "Organize the world's information and make it universally accessible and useful." Google has been extremely successful in its mission, with a flywheel effect of increasing users and data flowing into its multiple billion-plus-user products (e.g., Search, YouTube, Maps, Gmail, etc.) with a constantly improving user experience facilitating better monetisation, driving reinvestment in engineering talent and raw computing muscle, setting off the cycle anew. Nevertheless, Google has experienced a series of faux pas, from the initial botched launch of Gemini (Google's Chat GPT equivalent) to evidence of ideological bias in its AI model construction, rendering farcical query results. Google may be suffering from cultural and leadership malaise. This is concerning, given that Chat GPT and alternatives are the first credible threat to Google's cash cow Search business, which commands over 90% market share. While Alphabet (Google's parent company) rose 9% in March, possibly reflecting Google's latent potential to be a significant beneficiary of AI, we are nevertheless monitoring the situation closely.

A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER cannot be regarded as an indication of future TERs. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the Fund and impacts Fund returns. The TIC should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors including market returns, the type of Fund, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.
